TechWatch Brings Focus To Medical Technology

In collaboration with the Blue Shield of California Foundation, Health Affairs will publish, disseminate, and promote important research, commentary, and “thought pieces” related to the development, purchasing, and use of medical technologies and their implications. The aim is to promote understanding and discussion of policy issues among public and private leaders, researchers, stakeholders, consumers, and others concerning new medical technologies, including pharmaceuticals, biologics, medical devices, diagnostics, and advanced imaging modalities. This will be accomplished through the publication of a series of papers designated as “TechWatch” articles, such as the two that follow here, and various multimedia approaches including blog posts and podcasts.

We invite interested authors to submit work for consideration under this initiative. A list of sample topics may be found on our Web site (http://www.healthaffairs.org/techwatch/techwatch.php). All submitted manuscripts will be subjected to rigorous internal and external review involving a minimum of two outside reviewers.
